ABSTRACT

The present invention is a thermal processing method including: a step of conducting a predetermined thermal process in a low temperature zone to a plurality of objects to be processed held in a tier-like manner by a heating unit, in a processing container that is made of metal and has the heating unit therein, and a step of introducing a cooling gas into respective areas in the processing container divided in a height direction of the objects to be processed.

5

10